WHY THEY STRAYED
author of BREAKTHROUGH

1983

It's the human condition to seek
the unknown and
make sense of it

The unknown God
wants to be known.

There is a spiritual God
who created all that is.

He gave life, location, and time to people so they might know him.

He is as close as air but
is distinct from it

Knowing him requires repentance.

All will be judged by the resurrected one.

God's activity will be explainable in "naturalistic" terms.

If anything contingent
exists, there must be something necessary.

If Jesus truly rose from the dead, his teaching is the most authoritative.

Relationship fills in
the blanks.
